Oh what a Lovely War

"Oh What a Lovely War" is an exciting and challenging show for both audience and cast. You cannot fail to be moved by the sentiments, whilst having a jolly good time watching the performance. There are great sing-along tunes - "Goodbye," "Tipperary" and, of course, the title song - but also moments to make you think and reflect on why we go to war and the effects upon the lives of ordinary people at that time.

The show was originally devised by Joan Littlewood's Stratford

East Theatre Workshop and, with the help of Charles

Chilton, the script was finalised. The action progresses through scenes that show the attitudes of the soldiers, their training and recruitment, interspersed with songs and more serious comments about war. If you like your theatre intelligent and entertaining, then this is for you! There's lots of dancing, laughing and crying to be had in a show like this. You'd be mad to miss it.
